HEAVY RAINS CAUSE FLOODED ROADS

Heavy Rains Cause Cave In of Orland House

A freak accident occurred early Friday evening to the Harold Morlock home in Orland Park. The house had been raised up on timbers and jacks and the earth underneath had been excavated to a depth of about eight feet for the purpose of making a basement for the house. The excavating work had been practically completed and was ready for the pouring of the concrete foundation when, suddenly, the house sank almost out of sight into the excavation.

The front end sank almost to the bottom of the hole and the front porch was sheared from the house as if chopped off with a huge axe. The rear end of the house did not drop as much, being held up by its porch and by the timbering and consequently the house rested in the excavation with the floors inclined at a steep angle toward the front. The household effects were thrown about and practically all the dishes and other fragile articles smashed to bits.

The house was occupied by the Day family as tenants and fortunately, none of them were in the house at the time of the crash. The sound of the crash and the screaming of the witnesses was heard for blocks around and the Orland Park Fire Department and Chief John Helenhouse were called on the scene within a few moments of the accident but luckily there was no outbreak of fire.

It is thought that the excessive rainfall of the previous day had soaked the ground and weakened the supporting timbers and jacks and caused a slipping which precipitated the accident. The exact cause and the nature and extent of the damage done has not as yet been determined.

Mrs. Earl Bettenhausen Elected County Chairman of Will Co., Home Bureau

Mrs. Earl Bettenhausen of Green Garden township was elected county Chairman of the Will County Home Bureau at the annual meeting held at Plainfield on last Tuesday. He especially emphasized the need for having a continuous moving program with no brakes and no slowing up of the process. A special violin solo by Reverend McGladeri and two vocal solos by Mrs. Howlison, both of Plainfield, were especially enjoyed.

One of the outstanding events of the business section was the burning of the final note of the money borrowed to start the Home Bureau organization three years ago. Blinded by the dense fog early Monday morning, Andrew Cisko of Chicago, a Wilmington munitions worker, driving south on the Southwest highway at Orland Park, missed the turn at 143rd street and crashed headon into the front of the Zerb's building. The front of the car, a Pontiac Sedan, was crumpled like a match box and the plate glass window of Yunkers Tavern was shattered and a section of bricks and masonry broken off the corner of the building.

In spite of the terrific impact, Mr. Cisko and a passenger riding with him, sustained minor cuts and bruises which were given first aid treatment at the office of Dr. S. S. Leavitt in Orland Park.

Early this spring another car hit the Zerb's building in almost the same spot and caused several hundred dollars damage. The autist causing the damage has not paid a cent to date and Mr. Zerb's is still holding the wrecked car. In the crash of Monday morning the damage to the building will again amount to a few hundred dollars but the owner of the car causing the damage, has no insurance, so Mr. Zerb's has another loss. The wrecked car in the latest crash is only worth about $25 for junk. Mr. Zerb's has taken the matter up with the State Highway Department about some safety measures being adopted to prevent cars crashing into his building and causing him heavy loss.

An interesting subject was brot up for discussion at the meeting of the Frankfort village board Monday night by Mayor George Sangmeister. The question involved was that the village has been furnishing the supplies and blanks in question.

Mayor Sangmeister says he does not oppose furnishing the supplies to the police magistrate's office, but he does consider it unfair that the village should not get all the fine money.

After paying for the police magistrate's supplies the village in very many instances does not get the fine money which goes to the county under the law.

For instance if the police magistrate has wage garnishment cases, the village pays for the office supplies and forms used, but does not receive anything in return. The question involved has been referred to the Illinois Municipal League as to village should continue to pay for the

Liess Filling Station Marooned By High Water

Rains of cloudburst proportions flooded many low spots on highways and fields Monday afternoon and evening.

In the first deluge shortly after-noon the highway and parking lot at the Rock Island depot in New Lenox was turned into a miniature lake and the water rose so rapidly that it reached the running boards of parked cars.

The Lincoln Highway between New Lenox and Joliet was badly flooded in spots but the new highway which has just been opened to traffic was not flooded, being higher than the old road.

Monday evening an equally heavy down pour added greatly to the flood waters of the afternoon and Hickory creek began to rise rapidly. Water flowed over Cedar Road and soon reached the edge of the yard of the Ceward Batson place formerly the old Howard Francis property.

Water came quite close to the New Lenox Lumber yard and was up to the doors of some of the cottages along the banks of the stream in Brookwood.

Traffic on Lincoln highway into Joliet had to be routed via Washington Street when the subway under the Rock Island tracks on Lincoln Highway was flooded to a depth of 5 feet.

Wolf Road north of Mokena was badly flooded north of the Wabash railroad. The fields on both sides of the highway were covered with flood waters which soon over flowed Wolf Road and the Southwest highway at the Liess filling station which was completely surrounded by water. Mr. Chas. Liess and his son Robert warned autoists not to drive off the pavement for fear some one might drown if a car should upset.

Mr. Liess kept all his lights burning all night so that his filling station really served as a light house.

The flood waters got into one room of the filling station, but the living quarters did not become flooded altho the water was right up to the doors.

The flood waters did not subside until late Tuesday afternoon and evening. Richard Marti

United States Is Expanding New Merchant Marine

Will Launch Two Ships Every Week Day In 1942.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — America, cradle of democracy, is busy these days with new cradles being built for her growing fleet of merchant vessels. From Washington to California, from Florida to Maine and all along the Gulf Coast, the "rocks and rills" resound to the beat of riveters' hammers on steel, giant cranes whine while dark hulls form shapes on ways cuddling in a forest of scaffolding.

With a goal of 1,383 freighters, tankers and passenger-cargo by the end of 1943, the ship-building program, under the direction of the United States maritime commission, is now in full swing. It will bear a cost well over $3,000,000,000. Officials say in a matter of a few months, ships will be launched at the rate of two each day.

Creation of this new ship armada will, they point out, accomplish three major objectives. It will bring vital defense cargoes to the U. S. from far flung sources, carry sorely needed war material to nations fighting the enemies of democracy and, when peace returns, present this country with the maritime supremacy of the days when the proud clipper ships of the U. S. ploughed the waves of all important sea lanes.

New Liberty Fleet.

First of the new Liberty Fleet ships, the S. S. Patrick Henry, slid down the ways recently, followed on the same day by 13 other vessels in a mass launching, from 11 ports on two oceans. Built under the auspices of the U. S. maritime commission, a day was set aside for the launching of these 14 ocean liners, preceded by an address by President Roosevelt in celebration of America's ship-building program. A few days before this event the 35,000-ton $75,000,000 battleship Massachusetts was launched at Quincy, Mass.

Symbolic of the speed with which the U. S. is increasing her naval forces was the action of the shipyard in laying the keel of the new 10,000-ton light cruiser, Flint, one minute and 23 seconds after the huge warship had left her ways free for another vessel. The Massachusetts was completed seven months ahead of schedule. At present 93 merchant ships are scheduled for the maritime commission and other owners.

While in the last war the output of merchantmen was even more prodigious, it came too late to be of much use. Twenty-three hundred ships, from the great yard of Hog Island, near Philadelphia with 50 ways, and from scores of other yards, never saw war-time service. They became tied up in a "ghost fleet" after the war, because most of them were too slow to compete with the fast merchantmen launched by Old world neighbors fighting for trade.

Old Ship Valuable.

As the present conflict spread, these U. S. ships literally became worth their weight in gold. In this mechanized war, planes and ships are most in demand. For nearly two decades, American seafaring traditions rotted with the hulks moored in New world waters. In one five-year period, between 1922 and '27 only two ocean-going freighters were launched in this country.

Above is shown the S. S. Sea Arrow, the first major merchant ship launched on the west coast since the first World War. It slid down the greased ways on September 15, 1939, at Oakland, Calif.

N. Y. Man Creates $1,000 American Legion Award

INDIANAPOLIS.—American Legionnaires from several thousand cities, towns and villages throughout the nation are expected to compete during the coming year for the first annual community service award created recently by Lewis S. Rosenstiel, New York businessman, according to Homer Chaillaux, head of the Legion's Americanism committee.

The award, consisting of $1,000 annually, will go to the Legionnaire

Warships to Protect Ocean Shipping

In a recent radio address President Roosevelt failed to specifically define the limits of America's defense waters. The dotted line on the chart shown above is generally regarded as the chief defense zone of the U. S. and, in accordance with the Chief Executive's utterance, constitutes the main danger section for the Axis powers. In reporting his orders to the navy to "shoot on sight," he emphasized that he meant the Pacific as well as the Atlantic, in fact all oceans and seas were included in his command.

Money could not be borrowed to build ships as it seemed impossible to operate them at a profit. Foreign owned bottoms carried two-thirds of our commerce.

With U-boats and planes now sinking between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 tons of shipping each 12 months, enough boats cannot be built, on short notice, to fulfill requirements of the U. S. to say nothing about requests from England, Russia and China for more and more boats.

The one bright light in this situation is the merchant marine act of 1936, passed by congress under stimulation of President Roosevelt. Then the United States maritime commission was created and charged with the job of re-establishing the once strong American merchant marine, and building efficient auxiliary ships, without which, the expanding navy would be nearly useless. Recruiting and training the proper personnel also came within their jurisdiction.

The Ten-Year Program.

Abolished by this same 1936 act, was mail subsidies. Instead, they substituted a policy of making grants to cover the difference between building and operating the boats under the flag of the U. S. as between this same procedure under other flags with low cost labor and material.

Today one of our fastest growing defense agencies, the maritime commission began with a staff of less than 100 men. Its first task was to survey the country's need in ships and to plan and carry out the stupendous program now in force. The foundation for the present large-scale operations was a 10-year program of building 50 ships per year or a total of 500. This was known as the long range program and 110 vessels had been delivered by September 19. Then in line with its second duty, the commission had turned over to the navy, in August, 107 ships, totaling nearly 2,000,000 tons. Among the craft was the United States liner America, a 27,000-ton vessel which is now the naval transport, West Point. It was the largest built under their program and the largest ever built in an American yard. The war caused two 35,000-ton vessels, planned for the Pacific trade, to be held up until the present war ends.

Navy Takes Over Ship.

It was in the fall of 1937 that the commission awarded the contract for the America. Later they contracted with the Standard Oil company and shipyards for a dozen speedy tankers that could be quickly changed over to navy auxiliaries in case of need. The vessels were paid for by the oil company but the commission provided $880,000 for each vessel to equip them with secret defense devices and additional speed. The navy has since taken over all of the ships.

The commission's own technical personnel was meanwhile designing fast freighters and passenger-carrying liners for the long range program. With an average speed of 15 knots, from 6,000 to 12,000 tons, they were of three types, the C-1, C-2 and C-3. With low fuel consumption they were economically operated. Twenty additional ones, of pattern C-2, were ordered early in 1938. Other contracts followed and by November, 1939, over 400 craft had been ordered, due, of course, to the outbreak of the war.

In January, President Roosevelt put out a call for "more and more" ships and "more and more" speed. Within 30 days the commission had planned and put into operation an emergency program for 200 ships of a special design, from a British model, who ordered an additional 60 for themselves. The American vessels were dubbed by the President "ugly ducklings" as in comparison with other graceful long-range craft, these appeared to be not much more than "floating boxes with pointed ends." But veteran boat builders insist these cargo carriers will do the job and recent events seem to prove their worth.

F. D. R. Asks More Ships.

Soon after the Liberty ship program had been started, the Chief Executive, under the lend-lease program, asked for 222 ships, 112 of the Liberty type, 110 of the standard type first conceived by the maritime commission. Then in July, congress, at the request of the President, passed a bill authorizing 541 more vessels, of which 25 were to be sea-going tugs. No one can predict how far America will go with her ship building plans, but the original 500 ships in 10 years has expanded into almost 1,400 for 1943 delivery and shows no signs of slackening. The outcome of the present conflict will probably be the deciding factor in the continuance or discontinuance of the program.

Scientific Study Reveals Rules for Relaxing Slumber

ST. LOUIS.—Why is insomnia on the increase today, with millions of people ready to throw in the sheet for a wholesome eight hours of sleep? It's because of a cultural lag, say some of the most noted scientists in the country, whose researches have uncovered the fact that although this country boasts the finest springs, mattresses and bedlinens in the world today, most people do not take advantage of them. Like well-meaning but blundering children, they buy beds that are too short, set mattresses on improper springs, and do not utilize to the full the new improvements in sheets. This, added to the fact that modern living is a drain on nervous energy, explains why the arms of Morpheus are more coveted today than riches or power.

For more relaxing and restful nights, a study has shown that your mattress should measure at least six inches longer than you do and be at the very least 39 inches wide. To secure perfect muscular relaxation, vertically coiled springs topped by an inner spring mattress are best. To avoid lumping and uneven wear to the mattress, turn it end for end and top for bottom at least once a week. To prevent feet from rubbing against worn-out frayed spots, sheets with reversible frames allow you to shift them top for bottom every day.

One-Third of National Income Will Be Re-quired When Our Defense-Spending Reaches Present Goal . . . Pork Barrel Being Opened.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—One-third of every dollar of income—that is, one-third of our total national income—is the rate of expenditure for war purposes which high officials of the administration estimate, will have to be spent when defense spending reaches the present goal.

And this does NOT mean, they hasten to explain, that 33½ cents out of every dollar will be the maximum. What they are talking about is the PRESENT goal. It may be shifted considerably higher by the time it has been attained—in fact probably long before that.

"That's what we will have to do if we really mean what we say, and produce enough to beat Adolf Hitler," one of these officials added. "If we do not mean what we say then we had better do some thinking right now and make the best terms with Hitler we can."

So far, administration officials say, production for war purpose is far from satisfactory by any conceivable standard. It is not as much as we knew it had to be six months ago, whereas six months ago there was no adequate conception of what would be needed.

All of this, it is pointed out, is important not only to the man in the street or on the farm as a patriotic American, it is important to him as a consuming individual. This is true because when we reach the goal of one-third of all our national income being spent for war purposes, that means, roughly, that our standard of living will be reduced a considerable fraction of that amount.

It would be easy to say that the man who has been spending $180 a month to maintain his family would have to get along on $120 a month. But this is oversimplified. Perhaps the man has been saving $20 a month. If he diverts that $20 a month to buying the baby bonds that will be part of the reduction, and therefore will not affect his spending. Because that $20 a month will be put into war spending by the government.

Not So Simple

Nor is it possible to make it as simple as this—that one-third of our annual income must be devoted to war expenditures; therefore the man with an income of $180 a month must give $60, either in bond-buying or taxes, to the government. It may be that with the rise in prices, which is sure to come, his income will be slightly increased. However, by the same token a rise in prices will mean that the government will have to spend just about that proportion more—in dollars—to get the production now considered necessary for war purposes.

But even if it is not possible to draw an accurate diagram of what will happen in any individual case, it is certain that things will get a lot worse before they get any better.

There is just one element of satisfaction which may comfort the American worker and housewife during the tough period ahead. The tougher it is, the more of our income is devoted to war expenditures, and therefore the less we are able to spend on the things we would like to have, the sooner the war is likely to end—always assuming that we are going to win. Any other assumption, naturally, is unthinkable for Americans, no matter what Lindbergh and the isolationist senators may say to the contrary.

Pork Barrel Is Being Opened

Just as the new excise taxes—runner of the heavier income taxes—begin to bite congress will be pushing through one of the biggest pork barrel bills in the nation's history. Pork barrel it will be in the most vicious sense of the old expression.

"I'll vote for your pork if you vote for mine," is what it virtually makes individual members of congress say to one another. One could substitute "graft" for "pork," though of course there is no thought of individual graft. The "pork," or "graft" is merely federal money to be spent in the districts and states of the individual legislators.

Just another manifestation of the old political doctrine that the congressman who brings home the bacon—the one who is able to pry federal money loose for expenditure in the territory of his own constituents—is the one who gets re-elected.

Rather a silly notion, one would think, in a time when our people are about to be taxed to the bone to provide for war expenditures, and even sillier when one thinks of most of these pork barrel projects as useless waste, not only of federal funds but of labor. And all this at a time when the government is clamoring for more defense materials than present capacity can produce, and urging sub-contracting in any community which can do the work!

Navajo's Magic Still Is Invoked For Human Ills

Tribe Clings to Ritual of Colored Sand and Weird Chants.

WINDOW ROCK, ARIZ. — The magic of the Navajo medicine man still is esteemed by his thousands of tribesmen scattered over 15,000,000 acres of the reservation far more than the vaccines and prophylaxis of the white man.

When a Navajo is really ill he does not go to the Indian service for treatment. He thinks first of the good healing dance, the "sing" of the sha-man and the religious ceremonial sand painting.

The Navajos are a deeply religious people and despite the white man's efforts to replace the old rites, they permeate every part of the Indians' lives.

Calls Medicine Man.

When a member of the Indian family becomes ill he sends for the nearest "hatali," as the medicine man is called. The healer may be many miles away on the Painted Desert, tending his own flock of sheep.

The Navajo believes that when a person is sick he is possessed by an evil spirit and will not recover until the evil spirit is exorcised.

A "sing" is begun at desert twilight and continues far into the night. The song rises, swells to a wild, rhythmic chant, and ends in a yell, primitive and triumphant.

Shortly after sunrise the making of a sand painting begins. This is prepared in front of the hogan in which the sick person is resting.

A rectangle of dry sand is smoothed, about three feet wide, five feet long and three inches deep. Piles of colored sands, white, yellow, red, black and bluish gray, are placed at the sides.

The pigments represent the five sacred colors of Navajo mythology.

Uses Colored Sand.

The medicine man picks up small quantities of the colored sand in his fingers and allows it to flow slowly between his fingers to form a pattern or design composed of circles within circles, and figures representing feathers and other objects.

In the center are the figures of two gods. At the bottom is a black border, representing the sacred home of the gods, Navajo mountain.

The two gods, male and female, are represented as standing on the mountain. Zig-zag lines represent lightning.

The sand painting is a prayer to the gods to drive the evil spirit of sickness out of the person who is ill. Chants are kept up during and after the making of the sand painting for about two hours. Brilliantly painted gourds are rattled.

Finally the sands of the painting are scattered to the four winds and the healing process is completed. The patient is considered on the road to recovery.

Locked in Refrigerator, Truck Driver Cools Off

NEW YORK.—New York was hot enough for everybody but Dan Pores.

Pores was inside a refrigerator truck preparing a delivery in the Times Square district when a taxi driver slammed the refrigerator door, fearing it would brush his cab.

"Hey," said the truck driver to the cab driver, "that guy in there is the only guy who's got a key."

The lock was on the outside. Half an hour passed during which time 300 persons, sweltering in a midsummer heat wave, were attracted by the banging and whooping within the refrigerator.

A police emergency squad was called, but before it arrived, half a dozen cab drivers used jack handles and other emergency implements to pry open the door.

There stood Pores. "What's the idea of busting in the door?" he said.

Bit Confused by Cases

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—It was a confused audience that watched a three-act "play" in Salt Lake City police court.

In the first case on the docket, Cloyd Shaffer was convicted of operating a bookmaking business on a downtown street corner.

Claude Shaffer, the next defendant, won an acquittal on a charge of doing a bookie business.

A fine was levied on Claude Shaffer, alias George Jones, when he was found guilty of drunkenness in the third trial.

The judge wasn't sure whether the name was Shaffer, Shaffer or Jones—when one man—principal in all three proceedings—walked out of court.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

INSTALLMENT TWELVE

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

"I'll bet his liquor comes in by air," said Red.

"Exactly. So he tried to wipe you out—tried to stop a government survey party? Now I wonder just why? What's back of it all?"

"Of course, they must have decided that we were only prospectors posing as surveyors."

"Shooting prospectors is not so dangerous as firing on government men but it's still murder, ain't it?" snorted McNab.

"True!" laughed Finlay trading winks with Red behind the back of the outraged McNab. The trader's hatred of Isadore would be useful. He knew much about Waswanipi which they would learn, for the evening would be long. "If you've heard he flies stuff in from somewhere south in the Province, possibly you've heard about the August plane from the Bay," suggested Garry.

"From the Bay?" demurred McNab. "Now what in thunder would he be—wait a minute!" The trader scratched his jaw as his half-shut eyes squinted at a gun-rack in a seeming effort to recapture a vague memory. "I've got it!" he exploded. "North, at Rupert House, two summers back, they were talking about a strange schooner some traveling Crees had told of seeing off the mouth of the Hurricanaw. The Indians said a sea-plane was lying in the lee of an anchored ship. Later the plane headed south and disappeared over the muskeg of the mainland. They've been trying to figure that out, at Rupert, ever since."

Finlay glanced triumphantly at Malone. Lise's story was corroborated. "Was it spring, summer or fall they saw it?"

McNab nursed his chin. "Why, let's see! I was at Rupert in early September. It must have been in the summer."

Finlay's face brightened with satisfaction. "McNab, that plane was bound for Waswanipi. Every August a plane from the North stops there, then heads south."

"Waswanipi?" blurted the puzzled trader. "What's the reason for it? What could it carry?"

Finlay leaned toward the Scotchman chewing nervously on his pipe stem. "McNab, that's just what Constable Malone and I would like to know."

After a clean-up and shave, Finlay and Red joined the trader at his house for supper. A shy woman whose face wore lines etched by a life of isolation and worry, and an excited girl with an unruly red-gold bob, and the height and vitality of her father, welcomed them.

"Mary, this is Mr. Finlay and Mr. Malone," said the trader. "Gentlemen, my daughter, Thistle!"

The quick violet eyes of the girl swept Finlay's erect figure and clean-cut features with a passing glance of approval. But it was to Red's freckled face with its infectious grin which bared his regular teeth that the girl's dancing eyes clung. As she laughed at Malone's sallies, dimples dented her brown cheeks.

"What a pair!" thought Garry. "If I know the signs, she's fallen for the devil already."

Far into the night three men sat in a cloud of smoke in the trade-room.

"Sergeant," demurred McNab. "It's flat suicide for you to go back there now. I tell you you haven't a chance. But if you do hang on until that plane shows up from the Bay, how are you going to learn if she carries gold south, with that Indian mob of Isadore's watching her? Man, it's ridiculous!"

Malone laughed. "You've never seen Sergeant Finlay operate."

"McNab," said Finlay, quietly, "if we're there when that plane arrives, we're going to learn what all this mystery's about."

McNab's blue eyes snapped. "Yes, I think that's just what you two would start to do in the face of them all. You've got the nerve all right. But have you ever seen what whiskey will do to bush Indians? Tete-Blanche and that crew'll wipe you out, then hide up in the Bitter Water swamps."

"Between muskeg and water and swamp there's fifty miles of it. It's absolutely impassable except for an Indian trail or two. They'd never be found there, Sergeant. I don't want you to go back until you have help."

The gray irises of Finlay's eyes were rings of steel circling the pupils. "That's our hard luck, then. It's our job to get this crook. We'll start; someone else may have to finish it!"

McNab stubbornly wagged his sandy head. "I know, Sergeant, I know! But think of the odds, man! It's fifty to one up there, now, with the Indians against you!"

Red grinned at the grave face of his chief. "At Fort McLeod it was a hundred miners to one Mountie, eh, Sergeant?"

"What happened?" asked McNab.

"Sergeant Finlay elbowed his way into that mob of drunks and took his man, Mr. McNab!"

Suspicion prevails that Isadore, rich fur man, has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out of the country at any cost. En route to the Hudson's Bay post they visit Isadore in his palatial home, meet his wife and Lise,

McNab's face lit with admiration. "What do you know about this Tete-Blanche—ever seen him?"

"I saw him once at the steel. He looked uglier than a starved wolf. Never saw such a face! They say Isadore brought him here from the West, up God's Lake way. He was probably wanted there and had to leave. Two years ago, after those four men were reported drowned, he went up river to Nottaway and hung around making a lot of veiled threats. He had everybody uneasy. The Nottaway people know Isadore is rich and think he has government pull of some kind. They're afraid of him."

"Nobody but the station agent has dared open his mouth and he's been threatened."

Finlay handed the letter he carried in his wallet to the trader. "McLeod did more than talk. He wrote."

McNab returned the letter. "That's what they all think, eh there."

"Pretty state of affairs in a free country!" snorted Red.

"About Tete-Blanche!" Finlay's dark face was bitter. "Is he half crazy? The night they trussed me up I had a good look at his eyes. The pupils dilated like those of an Eskimo gone 'piblockto.'" McNab squinted hard at the speaker. "You know, I believe he is, just that, blood crazy. I've talked to Montagnais who've drifted here from Waswanipi. They say the Indians are afraid of him. They think he's got some mysterious power—talks with the spirits. But it's this medicine-man, Kinebik, that he works through."

"This is my daughter, Thistle."

"Isadore's whiskey and Kinebik's medicine-making have turned the young bucks against us," said Finlay.

"By the way, McNab, why did Isadore build such an elaborate outfit?"

"I can't account for it. It must be sheer vanity. He's certainly made big money in fur. But there must be something else. He's got a partner in Montreal, Blondell, who flies here every summer and, I'm sure, carries the liquor. They say he lives like a prince in the city. What my people are wondering, is what Blondell does in Montreal besides handle the fur."

"And they can't find out?"

"No, it's a mystery."

"How about placer gold?" asked Red.

"That's what they've suspected. Flake gold and nuggets would be easy to transport secretly in a plane. He may have struck some rich sandbars in the upper Waswanipi. That may be the answer. But Sergeant," the trader rested his hand on Finlay's shoulder as they parted for the night. "I wish you'd have that police plane sent here and wait for it. They fly to Isadore's place and arrest him. I like you two boys. I don't want you to go back to Waswanipi. With the Indians loose and Isadore not knowing you're police it's deliberate suicide."

Finlay took the trader's big hand. The shadow of the pain which lanced his heart crossed his face as he thought of the boy in his grave beside the thundering Waswanipi. "As yet I've nothing tangible on Isadore except this liquor business with the Indians. Before I'm through I'll have something he'll swing for. I'm not sending for help, McNab. Tomorrow we start back."

CHAPTER XIII

The following morning Blaise and the fretting airdale, circled by the hostile post huskies, waited on the beach beside the loaded Peterboro.

Over at the stockade gate Thistle's eyes clung to Malone's sober face.

"I've guessed what you are—you two," she said, her chestnut brows meeting as she searched his candid eyes in an effort to read what lay in his heart. "It's the way you Mounties carry yourselves—something so cool and masterful about you. You can't fool me, Mr. Man. I know you're police." Tears suddenly blurred her eyes as she drew a quick breath. "And I know from the way father acted this morning that he never expects to see you again! Oh, Red," she flung out desperately, "I want to see you again! I want you to come back, Neil!"

Isadore's stepdaughter. Answering an appeal from Lise, Finlay is ambushed but escapes. It develops that they are Mounted Police officers. They continue on to the Post and discuss the situation with McNab, a trader.

Red had the girl's trembling hands in his. "I'm coming back, Thistle!" he said, and his voice was hoarse with feeling. "I'm coming back straight to Matagami—to you, kid." Then with a shrug of his heavy shoulders he swallowed hard and the dancing lights returned to his eyes. "Now flash those white dazzlers of yours in one of those smiles that makes my heart go pitty-pat or I'll rumple that gold stuff you call hair right before your mother who's watching us through the window."

A smile broke through the girl's clouded face at the sally of the irresistible Red.

Over at the trade-house Finlay and McNab were saying good-by.

"My men should reach the steel with your report in thirteen days, but I wish you'd change your mind, Sergeant. Ask for immediate help and wait here for it!"

Finlay's thoughts were with the girl who waited for his message at Waswanipi. His mouth curled at a corner. In his eyes was the glint of sun on young ice. "McNab, the Mounted Police never send for immediate help!"

"I know! I know!" McNab wagged his head resignedly as he gripped Finlay's hand. "But I like you two boys! It's a shame—a rotten—"

The trade-room door swung wide and Blaise rushed in.

"Canoe comin' from de east! David look in glass and say it come from Isadore! I hid canoe and shut up Flame!"

"Tell Red I want him, quick!"

Malone burst into the room. "Put your glasses on that canoe, Garry!" Red cried. "Mine are packed! Something's up!"

"Are they near enough to see us?"

"No, they're miles away. What are the orders?"

Finlay took his binoculars from his duffle bag. "If they stop here, Red," he said, "we'll hole up in the fur-loft and listen while McNab draws them out. It may prove valuable. They've decided we passed them that night and are out to overtake us on the river."

Red shrugged his wide shoulders. "Overtake you and Blaise and me, in strong water? Swell chance! But we don't happen to be running!"

"No, we don't happen to be running!"

Far to the east on the wind-rippled surface of Matagami moved a black speck. Finlay focused his glasses. It was a big Peterboro driven by an outboard motor, with a crew of four men.

"Do you recognize any of them?" he asked McNab.

"Not yet. But it's from Isadore's. He's got the only outboard motor in this country."

The two returned to the trade-room while Finlay made his plans. "Whoever it is, McNab, get them in here and pump them dry. We'll lie up there in the fur-loft and hear it all. Tell them we stopped for grub yesterday, on our way to Rupert. That may send them hunting us down river. And we'll surprise Isadore when we show up at Waswanipi."

"Correct. I'll handle those Indians."

"Make them talk even if you have to feed them some of that scotch of yours. It will be legal for it's an order from the police."

The two men grinned. "Leave it to me, Sergeant."

Red and Blaise appeared with their Lee-Enfields.

"Don't think you'll need them, Red," said Finlay. "Now we'll hit that ladder for the loft."

"I'll have another look and let you know what I see," said McNab, as the three men disappeared through the trap-door of the fur-loft.

As they lay on the floor of hand-hewn, spruce planks near the opening, Finlay outlined his conversation with McNab.

"Suppose Tete-Blanche is in that canoe?" queried Red.

"Our job is Isadore!" cautioned Finlay. "What we want today is information. A fight, here, will spoil it all."

Red chuckled. "I wasn't serious, chief. I was only worrying about Blaise. We'll have to lie on him to keep him from jumping through that hatch."

Brassard's slit eyes glittered in the half-light as he grunted: "I can wait. But dis big fallar wid red head, we have tough time to keep his mou' shut!"

Red shook Blaise's calloused paw. "Now we're square, you old wol-verine!"

"Shut - up!" snapped Finlay

"Someone's coming!"

CHRIST OUR SAVIOUR

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 20:25-28; Luke 19:1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

"I believe in God, the Father Almighty, . . . and in Jesus Christ His only Son, our Lord . . . I believe in the Holy Ghost." How often we have solemnly repeated these words in the Apostles' Creed, and how appropriate it is that our present three month series of lessons on great Christian teachings should begin last Sunday with a study of God, the Creator and heavenly Father, and continue today with Christ the Saviour, and present next Sunday the Holy Spirit, the Comforter.

These are profound Christian truths, but at the same time they are so simple as to be grasped by the youngest child. Today we have the great privilege of presenting in our classes our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. He was

1. The Self-Denying Servant (Matt. 20:25-28).

Scripture clearly teaches that God's standards are not the same as the world's standards, and that His methods of operation are just the opposite of those of the world. All too often Christians and churches imitate the world both in principle and practice, with disastrous results. Consider

1. The False Greatness of the World (v. 25). "Rulers"—"greatness"—"exercise authority"—how altogether up-to-date these words sound. They are the big and swelling words of the small hearts and minds which rule after the manner of this world. They epitomize the ambitions of the great majority of mankind, but they are definitely non-Christian. We see that as we go on to consider

2. The Humility of True Greatness (vv. 26, 27). Service in the spirit of humility and self-sacrifice—this is the standard of Christ. Yes, and it is His command to His followers. To be great for Christ one must become the servant of others. This teaching appears all through Scripture (for example, see Luke 4:11; John 13:13-17; 1 Pet. 5:5, 6).

How often service in the church is rendered in a spirit of pride, self-glory, and for the commendation and reward of men. When that reward is not forthcoming or some real humbling sacrifice is required, the work is not desired or the worker becomes offended. Here is one of the roots of trouble in the church. Let us put it away as we look upon

3. Christ Our Example (v. 28). He paid the price of our redemption, going to the death of Calvary for us. From the highest glory which He had with the Father (John 17:5), He graciously stooped to deepest ignominy as He became sin for us (II Cor. 5:21). Throughout both His life and His death He perfectly represented that self-denying, self-humbling service which He expects of His followers.

II. The Seeking Saviour (Luke 19:1-10).

There is much that is precious and beautiful to be said about our Lord, but perhaps nothing which brings Him so close to needy humanity as the fact that He had "come to seek and to save that which was lost" (v. 10). He was

1. Ever Interested in Sinners (vv. 1-7). Jesus was on this occasion coming up to Jerusalem for the last time. The cross was ahead. He was much taken up with His coming death and greatly straitened in spirit (see Mark 10:32 and Luke 12:50). He was passing through the great and wicked city of Jericho, yet in the midst of His deep sorrow and out of the vast multitude of that city He reached out to touch one sinner.

Zacchaeus was a man despised for his calling of tax collector, and hated for his dishonesty. He was an outcast from his own people and a stranger to God's grace, but Jesus was interested in him. Are we ready thus to go to seek and save the lost? Are we better (or busier) than our Lord?

2. Always Able to Save Sinners (vv. 8-10). Zacchaeus was a rich man, but he was a sinner. It is not easy for a rich man to be saved, but it can be done (see Matt. 19:23-26). Read the preceding verses of that chapter (vv. 16-22) and you learn of another rich man who was not saved, the rich young ruler. He was a far better man than Zacchaeus—honest, upright, honored in his community. How was it that the wicked and despised rich man was saved and the good and respected rich man was lost?

The answer is that the former admitted that he was a sinner and thus made it possible for Christ to save him, while the latter loved himself and his gold more than Christ and shut the door against His redeeming love.

"Milk call sounds as sweet as pay call when the folks back home send a carton of cigarettes or a tin of tobacco." This is the consensus among men in all branches of the service who have ranked tobacco first in the gift line. Actual sales records from service stores—in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard—showing the favorite cigarette is Camel. The popular smoking tobacco is Prince Albert. Local dealers have been featuring cartons of Camels and pound tins of Prince Albert as most welcome gifts from the folks back home to the boys in the service.—Adv.

Oversized Antlers

Sometimes deer grow antlers so heavy that they cannot be lifted from the ground for any length of time and, consequently, the animals eventually die of starvation, says Collier's.

One such buck, found recently at Medicine lake, California, had to be shot because it could not lift its head into a position to be fed and its great antlers could not be sawed off because they were in the velvet or growing stage and still filled with live blood vessels.

problem in arithmetic accurately is the learning of facts; learning to love accuracy so that it becomes a control of ability is the development of an attitude; knowing how to read is knowledge or ability; learning to love to read is an attitude or interest. Having knowledge does not mean the child has the proper attitude.

Through the expanded program now in operation in the school, that is, the regular class work in spelling arithmetic, English, history and so forth; the activity program made up of band, glee club, nature study, handicraft, travel, drama and newspaper; and through the workings of the Achievement club the school is attempting to bring about this development of the whole child so that each child may be a happier individual and a better citizen.

Pete Lucas returned home from the German Deaconess hospital in Chicago Sunday following a stomach operation, but now he has developed pneumonia and is very ill.

Irene Morton is ill in bed at her home following a heart attack.

The Palos Community Church will hold its annual Rummage Sale on October 14 at the Church. It starts at 10 a. m., and a luncheon will be served at 12:30. There will be a New Table, Table of Plants and Shrubs and a Bake Table. All are cordially invited to attend.

Edw. Powell of Joliet was a Sunday visitor at the J. L. Mains home. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Willard of Joliet were Sunday callers on the C. H. Powell family.

A great many folks from Palos attended the supper held at the M. E. church in Orland Thursday night.

The Palos Park Oak Hill Cemetery Association meeting which was to have been held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Ed. Teason in Worth has been postponed due to the illness of Mrs. Teason.

While enroute through the West, M. L. Heeger and son Chester, stopped over to see his life-time friend and boyhood chum of more than 52 years standing. Although only a few days in our village, both of them were greatly impressed with the scenic beauty of our town and the hospitality of its residents, and promised a return visit in the near future to our Town, Mayor and Treasurer, Charles Heide and his good family. So much for town. We wonder if there is not some underlying hopes for M. L. H. as his son is a bachelor. Now girls watch for his return. P. S. A new resident addition of his type is always welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lowry and family of Midlothian were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell in celebration of Mr. Lowry's birthday.

Mrs. Jessie L. Main and Dorothy spent a few days down town on business and pleasure last week.

ORLAND PARK

Rev. H. L. Brett of the Orland Methodist church is attending the annual Rock River Conference which is being held in Winnetka all this week. There will be no church service or Sunday school held next Sunday because of this.

Attention is called to the fall collection of furniture, furnishings, clothing, shoes, hats, etc., by the Goodwill Industries of Chicago, which will be made on Thursday, October 16.

The Goodwill Industries is an institution working in connection with various Chicago district church organizations and doing home missionary and relief work among the underprivileged. They maintain a workshop in Chicago at which articles of furniture, clothing, shoes, etc., are reclaimed and repaired and are given away or sold at a nominal cost in the proper section of the city. The proceeds from the sale of these repaired articles are used to further relief work of the organization and those that are employed in the rehabilitation of donated material are also paid a small amount for their labor. If you have anything in the above line that can be made useful by repair and which you wish to see put to worthwhile use notify Mrs. S. S. Knox, phone Orland 100-W, who will arrange to have the truck call for the articles on October 16. Small articles, clothing, etc., may be brought directly to the Knox residence if you so wish.

Our local Methodist Church receives the cash value equivalent as a conference credit for all material donated from our community.

The unusually heavy rains of the last few days have caused the flooding of fields and ditches and in many places throughout the township gravel and dirt roads have been seriously damaged. Many of the homes have water in their basements.

Mr. Gebhardt Koehler, pioneer Orland resident, who has been confined to his bed with a heart ailment is some what improved.

Tom and Charles Cooper, twin brothers celebrated their birthday anniversary last Saturday with an informal dinner party in the home of Tom's daughter, Mrs. Lucille Ricketts of Evergreen Park. Besides their own families there was present another brother, Harvey Cooper and his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold S. Kinney and daughter Millicent have returned from a motor trip thru the Big Smoky Mountains in North Carolina and Tenn. Enroute they stopped at various places of interest, including Lincoln's birthplace at Hodgenville, Kentucky, and also the old homestead of Stephen Foster, which furnished the inspiration and background for his immortal song "My Old Kentucky Home" and the famous Medicinal Springs at West Baden, Indiana.

In spite of the inclement weather of last Thursday, the fall bazaar and supper of the Ladies Guild of the Methodist church was well attended.

Mrs. Lillian Knox, Red Cross Call chairman for Orland township, reports that at the annual luncheon for Red Cross chairman held at the Blackstone Hotel, October 1, plans were discussed for the enrollment of at least 190,000 members in Cook County during the annual roll call drive which will begin November 11.

The work of widening Kean avenue which has been in progress for the last month has been seriously hampered by the unusual amount of rain and unless conditions improve rapidly, the chances of completing the job before cold weather sets in are not so good.

Mr. and Mrs. Everette Creer are the proud parents of a 6 pound 5 ounce son, born in Silver Cross hospital on October 3rd. He has been named Allen Everette. Mrs. Creer was Edith Spiess of Mokena, Ill.

More than 100 friends of Cyril Kay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kay of Orland Park gathered in the pavilion of the Shady Hill picnic grove at 135 and Harlem ave., to surprise him and wish him luck on his induction into army service which will occur on October 9. Mr. Kay was presented with a beautiful gold wrist watch as a token of regard from his friends. Following the presentation, refreshments were served and the evening was given over to dancing.

Reports from the office of the County Superintendent of schools show that the Orland Park Community High school has increased its enrollment over last year by 62 pupils, or a gain of 129.2 per cent.

An acknowledgment has been received from the Methodist Old Peoples Home in Chicago of the receipt of the barrel of canned fruit which was recently collected and sent from Orland Methodist church. Besides sending a voucher for 25 dollars to apply on the Conference credit of the church the officials of the Old Peoples Home express their thanks and sincere appreciation, as well as that of their charges.

A miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Mary Ellen Heatherwick by Shirley Braasch and Lucille Wagner, in the home of Shirley Braasch. The home was attractively decorated with pink and blue, the chosen colors of the bride-to-be. The main diversion of the evening was the playing of bingo. After Miss Heatherwick opened the many beautiful gifts presented to her, a dainty lunch was served.

The guest list included: Esther Braasch, Viola Wegner, Viola Hamstengel, Olive Oberest, Mary Hane, and Irene Bush, Dorothy Mitchell, Eileen and Lila Smith, and Mrs. Wm. Heatherwick, all of Orland; Mrs. Roy Sandberg, and Henrietta Powlyaz of Lemont, and Mrs. Everette Heatherwick of Tinley Park. Mary Ellen will become the bride of Arthur Rohde of Lemont, Saturday, October 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Braasch and daughter Shirley and Mrs. Mathias Wagner visited in Chicago Sunday at the Ed. Wagner home. It was a surprise welcome home party, as Mrs. Wagner and son Edward and grandson Richard Hornbassel, had just returned home from a visit in Herrington, Kansas. A delicious dinner was served. The table was centered with a large cake inscribed, "Welcome Home". Guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Braasch and daughter Shirley, Mrs. Mathias Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mornbassel and son Richard, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Wagner and son Edward.

Miss Myrtle Townsend has returned from a trip to the east coast where she visited Major and Mrs. Francis Glahn, who is stationed at an army hospital base on Long Island. Major Glahn, a past Commander of Orland Park Post of the American Legion and Mrs. Glahn, for many years manager of the Orland telephone exchange, both send their greetings and best wishes to their Orland friends.

The 19th District P. T. A. conference held at Flossmoor, Illinois on October 7 attracted a registration of 407. The Orland Park unit was represented by Mesdames Maddox, Knox, Town, Oelke and Reish.

PIE PERFECTION—A WINNER EVERY TIME
(See Recipes Below)

AMERICA'S FAVORITE DESSERT

Confess now, how often would you turn down a tart lemon pie, a deep-dish apple pie, or a juicy cranberry one with the bright berries peeking out of the lattice crust? Not often, I imagine, or pie wouldn't be our country's favorite dessert. So here's to pie, favorite at dessert time or at a bakery sale, made in big tins or as individual servings:

Lemon Angel Pie.
(Makes one 8-inch pie)
4 egg yolks
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Cream egg yolks and sugar together. Add lemon juice and cook in double boiler until thickened, stirring often. Add butter. Remove from heat and fold in beaten egg whites. Pour into a baked pie shell. Top with meringue and brown in moderate (325 degrees) oven for 15 minutes.

Meringue.

2 egg whites, beaten until frothy
4 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Add sugar gradually to egg whites and continue beating until egg holds up in peaks. Fold in lemon juice. Any pie is as good as its crust, and if you've mastered the art, your pies will always be something to come back for. A good crust is tender, short, flaky, well flavored and smart enough to stand by itself. If you make a crust to be filled, cool the filling before it comes in contact with the crust so you won't have soggy pie.

Flaky Pie Crust.

2 cups flour
¾ cup shortening
¼ teaspoon salt
About ¼ cup ice water

Mix and sift flour with salt. Work in shortening using pastry blender, fork, knives, or fingertips, until mixture appears crumbled. Moisten with water until dough just holds together. Roll out on floured board and cut to fit pie tins. This makes enough for a double crust for a 9-inch pie tin. For a one-crust pie, use: 1 cup flour, ¾ cup shortening, ¼ teaspoon salt, and 2½ to 3 tablespoons water.

Delicious Rhubarb Pie.

1½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
1½ cups sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon melted butter
4 cups cut rhubarb
1 pie crust

Combine ingredients and let stand about 15 minutes. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry rolled one-eighth inch thick, allowing pastry to extend 1 inch beyond edge. Fold edge back to form standing rim. Fill with rhubarb mixture. Moisten edge of pastry with cold water; arrange lattice

LYNN SAYS:

To keep your pie crust short, have the shortening and water ice cold. If possible, have your bowl cold, too, and when handling the crust, use your fingers as little as you can, to keep the heat from the hands from getting into the dough.

Avoid rolling extra flour into the dough for this makes tough pastry. Fold the pastry over several times while rolling to help make flaky pastry. Never stretch the pastry into the pan. Make it large enough before fitting into pan.

Pie crust should be baked quickly on the lower shelf of the oven to prevent sogginess. The intense heat of the oven expands the cold liquid in pastry into steam, making the crust rise in flaky layers.

of pastry strips across top. Flute rim with fingers. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) for 15 minutes; then decrease heat to 350 degrees and bake 30 minutes longer.

*Apple Pie.

1 recipe flaky pie crust
2 pounds cooking apples
1½ cups sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons cornstarch

Pare, core, and slice apples. Mix with sugar, cinnamon, and cornstarch. Fill pie tin which has been covered with crust and dot fruit with butter. Lay on top crust which has been pricked with a fork, and flute edges. Bake 45 to 50 minutes in a moderate (350-375 degrees) oven.

Tang and color are this cranberry pie's delectable recommendations, so make enough to have seconds. You can have your vitamins, too, for cranberries are an excellent source of vitamin C, necessary for teeth and bones, and also a fair source of vitamin A which promotes appetite, stimulates growth, and makes for general well-being. Make it with a criss-cross crust and you'll come in with top honors:

Spicy Cranberry Pie.

(Makes one 9-inch pie)
1 recipe pie crust
4 cups cranberries
2½ cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Grated rind of 1 lemon
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1½ tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup water

Wash and pick over berries. Bring to a boil with the water, add sugar, boil gently, being careful not to break berries. Boil 5 minutes, remove from fire, cool, and add lemon juice, rind, and spices. Fill unbaked pie crust, cover top with strips, and bake 30 minutes in a hot (400 degrees) oven.

There are pies in which you bake just the crust, pies in which you bake crust and filling, and other pies which you don't bake at all. In this latter class are those pies whose crust is placed in the icebox to cool, then filled with filling and cooled until set. Here's a pie with crust, rich and crumbly, a filling that really melts in your mouth:

Coconut Custard Pie.

(Makes one 9-inch pie)
2 egg yolks
1½ cups milk
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water

Soak gelatin in cold water. Cook egg yolks, milk and sugar in double boiler until thick and pour over gelatin. Cool, add vanilla, and pour over a crust made of:

3 cups oven-popped rice cereal, rolled fine
¼ cup butter melted
¼ cup sugar

Combine cereal crumbs, sugar and butter and press evenly around the sides and bottom of a pie pan. Chill before filling. Pile meringue on top of filling. Use 2 egg whites stiffly beaten, to which add ¼ cup sugar slowly, and ¼ cup of coconut. Brown lightly in broiler.

In making a successful meringue, beat the egg whites until stiff and glossy, then blend in sugar completely to prevent beads of syrup from forming on top of the meringue. Leave the pie on the top of the oven after it is baked. Cold air striking the meringue will cause it to fall.

THE VEGETABLE SEDAN

Henry Ford has just turned out a car with a plastic body made largely from vegetables. It is part salad and part automobile.

It marks the triumph of the vegetable over the steel industry.

Henry has been experimenting with the idea for years. He is a man who always looks ahead. And wipes his own windshield.

A farm boy, Hank always nourished the notion that the "Man With the Hoe" could do anything that could be done by the "Vice President With the Blueprint." And after all there was nothing so fanciful in the idea of making an auto out of vegetables. Henry had been making spinach out of automobiles all his life.

Henry's first problem was to find out which vegetables would go best in automobiles. He could dismiss the cucumber at the start. Too many people won't have anything to do with cucumbers.

He then considered onions, but dropped them quickly. After all, he was making a car, not a hamburger.

Lettuce and tomatoes were suggested, but vetoed after the opening debate. Mr. Ford did not want the public to get his car confused with a reducing diet.

The soybean had begun to poke its noggin up and attract attention for some time. Of all vegetables, none has gotten ahead in life like the soybean.

The jelly bean, the string bean and the lima bean were better known, but never got anywhere industrially. (Once in October, 1928, a string bean did succeed in getting into the reception room of Mr. Ford's offices, but it was kept waiting so long that when the word finally came, "Mr. Ford will see you now," it had gone stale.—Ed note.)

But it was soon found that almost anything from a harmonica to a trailer could be made from the soybean, and Henry always liked a bean that was ambitious and full of get-up and go.

In 1932 somebody suggested that automobiles could be made from hay, but word came from Detroit that Mr. Ford was satisfied to keep on making hay from automobiles.

Anyhow, Henry has succeeded in his experiments, and in the priorities crisis has found a way to make a flivver almost entirely from the vegetable garden. The plastic material has 10 times the strength of steel in resisting a blow. It's the iron in the vegetables.

Of course, the government can throw a monkey wrench into Mr. Ford's car by putting the soybean and other vegetables on a priorities list. Anyhow, good luck to the idea. But we hope we don't get another one of those tire jacks made out of mashed potatoes.

First Musical Boxes

The prototype of the Nineteenth century musical box first became popular in the Netherlands, says Pathfinder. During the middle of the Fifteenth century, a Flemish organ-builder, Jehan van Steenken, obtained the first letters patent as "master of organs which play of themselves."

The dukes of Burgundy were patrons of inventors of ingenious mechanical boxes such as "organs which play of themselves," and musical clocks, birds, and snuff-boxes. Van Steenken received an annual pension for his invention from his liege lord, Philip the Good.

"IT'S to be another jumper year," says every fashion prophet who knows a thing about school smartness. Pattern No. 1450-B sounds a new note in jumpers—it has a jacket, too. The jacket is long sleeved, waist length, collarless—of a peasant feeling which keys it perfectly for the youthful, wide-skirted jumper. The latter is cut with a square neckline, low enough in front and in back to allow a great part of pretty blouses or soft sweaters to be clearly visible. The jacket makes this outfit warm enough to carry you right through the early autumn, and the whole outfit is so slim you can wear it under a winter coat easily. The jumper closes with a placket in the side which may be closed with snaps, hooks and eyes, buttons or a zipper.

Corduroy in bright vibrant colors is the first choice for a fabric for this jumper and jacket. Wool tweeds, gabardine, scotch plaids, flannel and velveteen are other suitable materials.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1450-B is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. Corresponding bust measurements 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37. Size 13 (31) jumper requires 3 1/4 yards 36-inch material; jacket, 2 yards. Send your order to:

OUR DEMOCRACY — by Mat

WOMEN'S FASHIONS AND DEMOCRACY.

SINCE THE EARLY COLONIAL
TIMES WHEN SUMPTUARY
LAWS LIMITING GOOD
CLOTHES TO THE VERY
WEALTHY WERE LAUGHED
OUT OF EXISTENCE,
THE U.S. HAS SCORNE
CLASS LABELS

AMONG OTHER THINGS, AND WITHOUT THINKING ABOUT IT, WE RECOGNIZE THE RIGHT OF EVERY WOMAN AND GIRL TO LOOK HER BEST.

ALL OVER AMERICA GOOD, STYLISH CLOTHES,
SMART APPEARANCE AND GOOD GROOMING
ARE SYMBOLS OF OUR DEMOCRACY.
